

SGWU bust hits 94; computer a total loss

Arrested students charged with arson, conspiracy and public mischief

by David Turoff

The riot squad of the Montreal police yesterday arrested ninety-four students occupying the Sir George computing center for the past two weeks, but not before flames destroyed the one-million dollar computer and caused at least one million dollars other damage.

The students are charged with arson, conspiracy and public mischief; arson carries a minimum sentence of seven years and a maximum sentence of life imprisonment.

Police arrived on the campus at about 5 am yesterday and sealed the students into the computing centre on the ninth floor, after being called by Magnus Flynn, Dean of Students.

Acting principal Douglass B. Clarke then ordered police to clear the computing centre, although the students had indicated that if their forcible eviction were attempted, they would go down with the computer.

After moving into the occupied area, police were obliged to withdraw, reporting two minor casualties, to await the arrival of the Special Squad (i.e. riot police).

Realising that they were under siege, occupying students then began to throw various objects, including furniture and paper, out of the ninth floor windows.

By nine o'clock, Mackay Street, on the East side of the Hall Building, in which the Center is situated, was covered by thousands of program cards and reams of computer read-out paper, both blank and used.

Computer tape, on which actual information is stored, also found its way to the street below.

Supporters gather

Almost 200 supporters gathered by mid-morning in front of the building, demonstrating their support by circling the building chanting "We want justice", and "Police go home".

Throughout the morning and early afternoon the crowd around the university continued to grow into the thousands, filling Mackay and Bishop streets, and the sidewalk on the opposite side of Maisonneuve Street.

A scuffle between some of the 200 supporters and the police resulted in two arrests, while frequent scuffles between people in support of the occupation and those in support of the police resulted in strained feelings on both sides.

When the students on the ninth floor lowered a basket for contributions of food and cigarettes, potential contributors were discouraged by police and hostile bystanders. The basket was eventually ripped down:

The atmosphere became tense as someone (vague reports have indicated that it may have been a student or a professional photographer) stuffed a burning rag into the gas tank of a police van stalled by a human wall in its attempt to enter the garage of the Hall building.

The rag was extinguished, however, and the police cleared the way for eleven police vehicles, 8 vans and 3 cars, to enter the garage.

Police then proceeded by elevator to the occupation area.

At this point, about one in the afternoon, smoke began pouring

Arrested students were identified and fingerprinted in the basement of the Hall Building before being taken downtown to station one in a convoy of eight paddywagons and three cars.

Administration out to fire Gray

Principal H. Locke Robertson and Dean of Arts and Science Harry Woods yesterday took the first step in an involved process to fire Stan Gray, a political science lecturer who has long been a thorn in the side of the administration.

Faculty members in Gray's department had recommended before Christmas not only that Gray's contract be renewed, but also that he be promoted to Assistant Professor.

In a letter handed to Gray yesterday, Robertson and Woods said "Please be advised that we are satisfied that there is adequate cause to justify our recommending that you should be dismissed from the University."

There will be a student rally on the move to fire Stan Gray in the ballroom of the Union at 1 pm today.

At a press conference yesterday, Robertson refused to elaborate at all on the "adequate cause", but University statutes say a faculty member can only be dismissed on the grounds of "immorality, inefficiency, or any administrative or other cause which in the opinion of its members affects adversely or is likely to affect adversely the general well-being of the University".

However, Paul Wong, president of the Arts and Science Undergraduate Society, talked to Woods yesterday and he says "I was informed that the dismissal proceedings were in no way related to Mr. Gray's academic activities, but specifically to his participation in the disruption of the Board of Governors meeting" (on January 27).

The two sides will meet tomorrow morning at 9:30 am "in an attempt to settle the matter". Also present at the meeting will be the chairman of Gray's Department (Economics and Political Science) J. R. Mallory, and the vice-president of the McGill Association of University Teachers (MAUT) Trevor Lloyd.

Asked at his press conference yesterday if the meeting would be open, Robertson said he had no objection if Gray had no objection and if the meeting would be ruly. Gray had no objection and so the meeting will be open.

Robertson also said that the administration is "prepared to face student disturbances" over the issue.

In another development, Assistant Professor Lou Goldberg said he and other sociology professors would "resign if Gray is fired".

The procedure the administration proposes to use to dismiss Gray is that adopted by the Canadian Association of University Teachers.

The first step of the procedure is to bring together the Principal, Dean, chairman of the Department, the faculty member and an advisor and "a disinterested professor having tenure who is acceptable to the Dean and the member."

The administration side named Trevor Lloyd the vice-president of MAUT, as the "disinterested professor", however, Gray was not consulted on the choice and so he may not show up at tomorrow's meeting.

Robertson backed off the choice at the press conference when he said that Lloyd was just the administration's recommendation for the "disinterested professor"; however, the letter to Gray does not say this, but rather says Lloyd will be a part of the committee which will meet tomorrow.

'political move'

Gray said last night "The attempt to fire me is clearly a political move on the part of the administration - partly for my political actions recently and also during the past two years. They've never challenged my academic qualifications.

"It is also a move against the radical movement on campus. They are striking at it by trying to eliminate someone they think is instigating it all.

"Rather than discussing the issues we've raised, or doing something to change the university, they prefer repressive measures."

"I think their action unmasks the myth of McGill as a liberal, pluralist university - it's OK to have radical ideas, as long as you don't act on them."

"What is also disconcerting is the authoritarian manner in which they are proceeding. I don't accept the right of two administrators and the Board to throw me out of the university - a power which they have and will exercise no matter how many token hearings they have to sanction it."

"I certainly intend to actively oppose their intention to fire me. I just wonder whom they're going to try to get next..."

Gray got his BA from McGill. Won a Moyse Travelling Scholarship, and went to Oxford in 1965. At Oxford, he earned his BPhil (somewhere between an MA and a PhD) in one year and came first in his class.

In fall, 1967, he returned to McGill and has been teaching courses in political theory for the past two years. The Faculty of Political Science recommended at Christmas that he teach two more courses in theory.

He is also writing a book on voting behavior, which will be published in spring by Random House.

As SGWU burns...

Shortly after one o'clock, police, newsmen and some students were staggering from the ninth floor, sick from the smoke and heat. Others, rags around their mouths, were moving fire hoses up the escalators and into the smoke. There were shouts of "where's the stairs" and "help him out" and others were saying "the students are crazy and they're going to burn." It was believed that the bulk of demonstrators were still inside the computing centre and were trapped by the fire and the barricades.

out of the windows of the ninth floor computing centre, as members of the occupation set fire to the furniture blocking the entrance to the Center.

Police, however, got through the burning blockade and made arrests but not before the computer was demolished by hand, axe, fire, smoke, and water.

Arrested students were then stood with their hands against the wall of an adjoining room, while the fire was brought under control by men from the five fire trucks which answered the alarm.

By four o'clock, the arrests were complete, and the arrested students had all been fingerprinted. It was another hour, however, before police vans could leave the building, due to the crowd outside the garage exit.

University spokesmen later said that damage to the computer, worth over one million dollars, was "total", while smoke and water damage to other areas was "extensive".

The occupation was undertaken by black students from Sir George, with extensive white support, in protest over hearings into charges of racism laid against biology professor Perry Anderson.

Sparked by negotiations

The spark to the explosion, ironically, was a weekend-long round of negotiations between the occupying students and the administration. By Sunday afternoon, the negotiators had hammered out a working proposal — and that's where the confusion began.

The students' lawyer said he had been told by his administration counterpart that the terms of the agreement — acceptance by the administration of the five demands set by the occupiers in return for an end to the occupations — would be ratified by his superiors.

The occupiers sensed victory and arranged a party Sunday night.

Meanwhile, the administration lawyer took the agreement to acting principal Clarke for signature. Clarke hesitated and said he wanted to sleep on it.

The next morning, he did not sign but rather called a Faculty Association meeting to discuss the proposals.

Spirits were still high in the two occupation centres — the computing centre and the Faculty Club — everyone waited for final victory.

But the faculty, after a stormy seven-hour session, rejected the proposal and replaced it with another one unacceptable to the students.

The faculty was incensed over Clarke's morning suspension of Professor Perry Anderson, ostensibly for his own protection.

Terms of the agreement included repudiation of the hearing committee which has completed its deliberations but has not yet reported its findings.

Since the black students considered the committee a "sham", they did not present any evidence to it, and its findings are expected to reflect this.

The faculty had also supported the old hearing committee and was not willing to renege on that support.

Their refusal to accept the negotiated agreement had tragic consequences.

IBM moved secretly at McGill

McGill's second-largest computer, an IBM 360, valued at approximately four million dollars, was removed over last weekend from its former position on the fourth floor of the McConnell Engineering Building; meanwhile, security arrangements at the Computing Centre have been tightened.

The computer is used by students and faculty members doing research, and is also rented out to corporations requiring its services.

According to W. D. Thorpe, Director of the Computing centre the move, made for space reasons, "was planned for a long time".

Thorpe said that the computer was relocated to rented space off campus, but would not specify.

IBM representatives, however, indicated that although the 360, one of two such machines operated by the university has been moved, both computers are, in fact, still on the Montreal campus.

David Johnson, an IBM salesman, told the Daily that the relocated computer "is still on McGill premises".

Apparently, however, the computer has been moved to the Financial Research Centre on Dorchester Avenue.

Students who have dealings with the computer centre have reported that security arrangements have been strengthened to a considerable degree. Research passes are now required to enter areas of the computing centre.

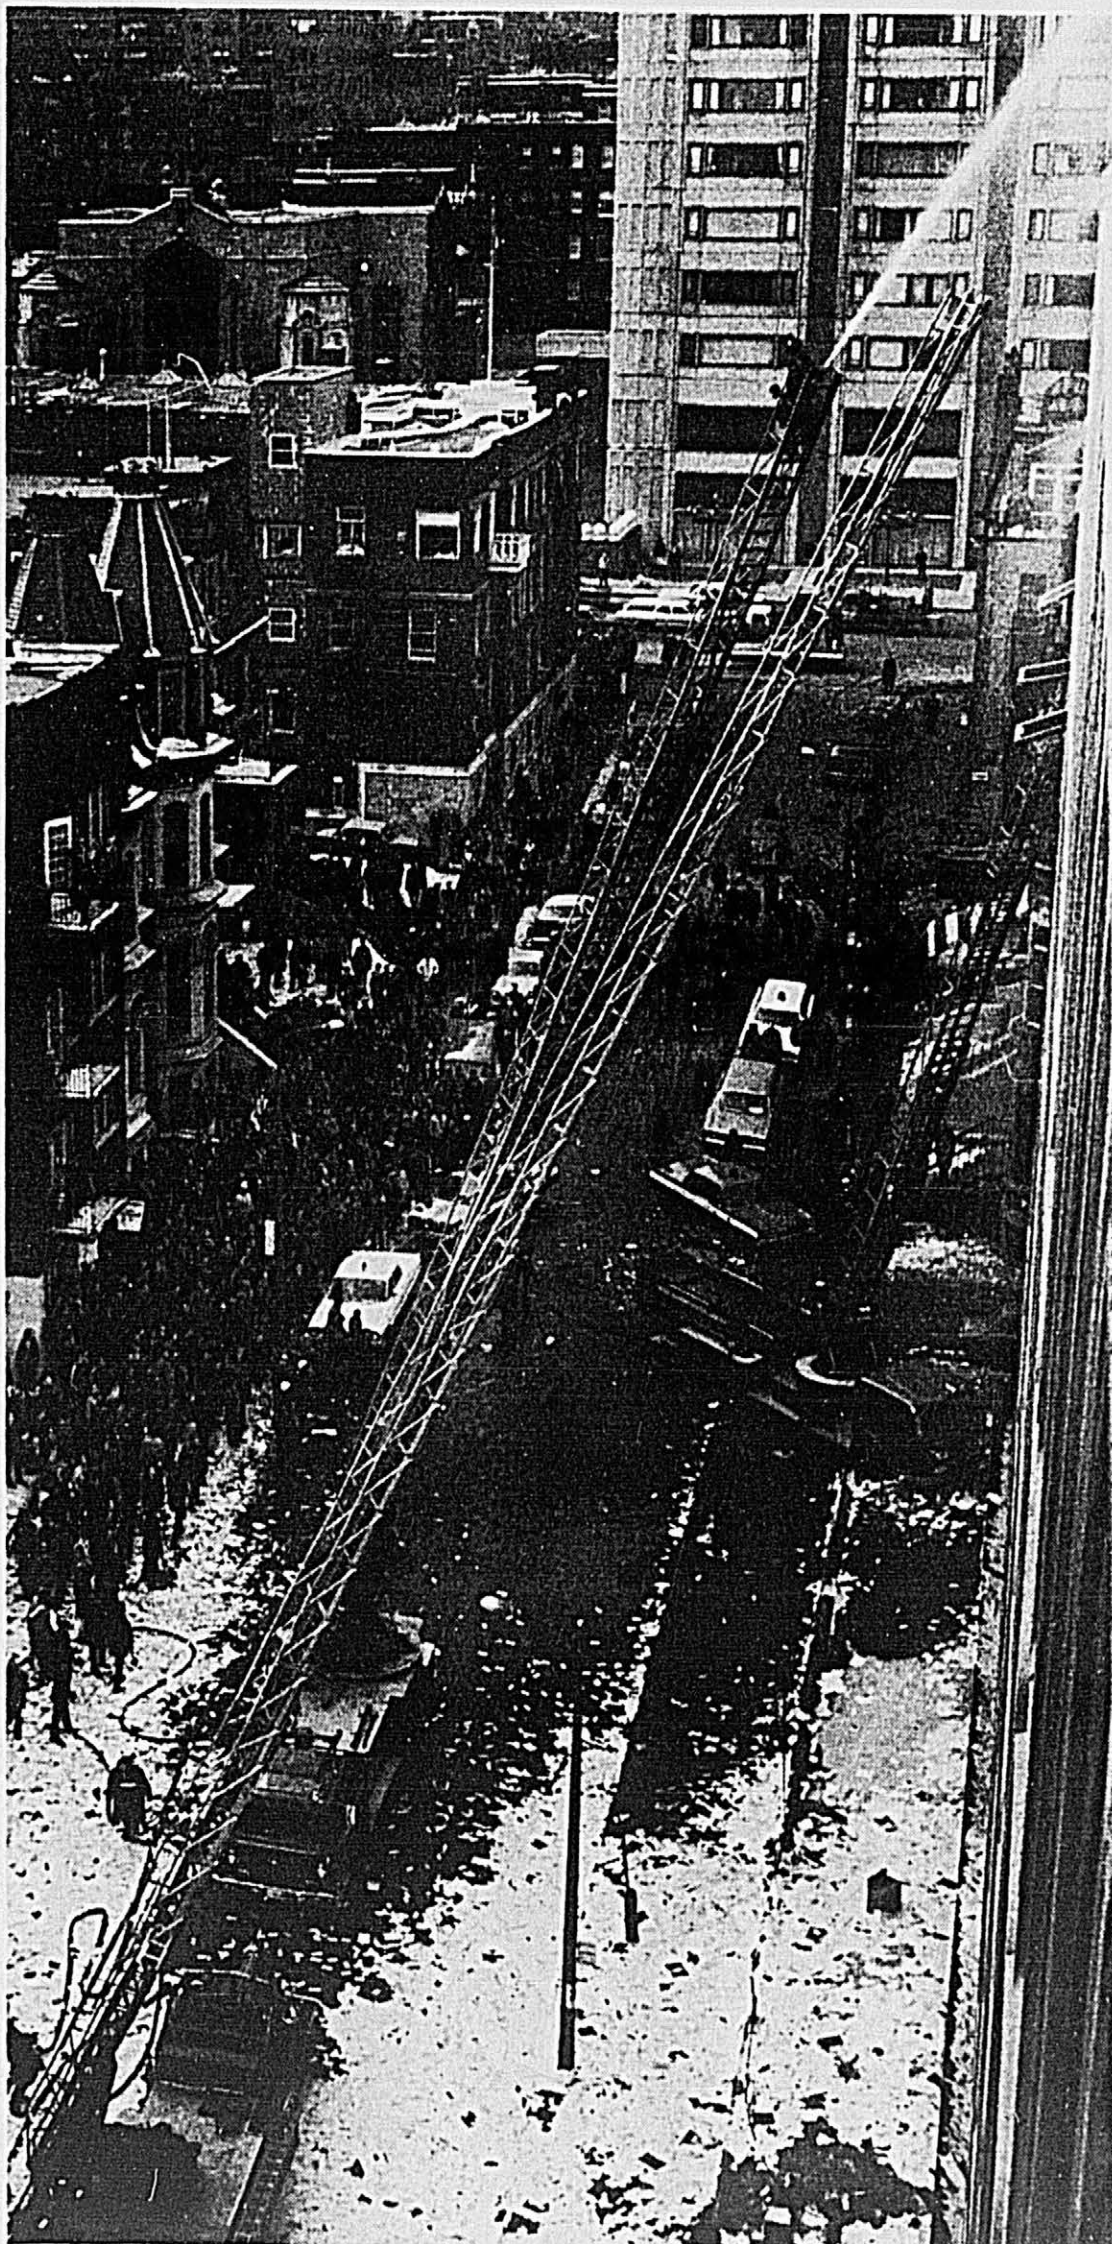

Principal H. Rocke Robertson was not available to comment on the location of the computer, the reasons for the move, or authorization for it.

In the absence of any other theory, it appears that the computer may have been moved in order to avoid the kind of occupation just ended at Sir George Williams.

For many reasons, a computing centre is strategically and tactically an advantageous target for an occupation, as demonstrated when MIS members invaded the computing centre in December.

However, in the event of future dealings with restless natives, McGill will be well prepared for such an occupation.

Stop reading as they did 100 years ago

The Way It Was — 1869: 100 years ago, people read the way you're reading right now. Word by word. About 250 words a minute. 100 years ago, that kind of reading was okay. You could keep up with what was happening fairly well.

The Way It Is — 1969: Today, it doesn't work. There's simply too much to read. Too much homework — too many magazines — too many books — too many reports and memos. Things are happening so fast, changing so fast, that even the people who try to keep up are falling behind.

What's The Solution? Learn to read faster and better. You can do it, too! So far, over 400,000 other people have done it. People from all walks of life including business and professional people, students and wives.

What's The Gimmick? There is none. These people took a course developed by Evelyn Wood. Practically all of them have at least tripled their reading speed with equal or better comprehension. Most did better. Our average graduate reads 6 times faster.

How Is This Course Different? Conventional rapid reading courses try for 450-600 words per minute. Most Reading Dynamics graduates can read 1,000-2,500 words per minute. Yet you don't skip or skim. You read every single word. Imagine being able to read a full daily newspaper page in less than two minutes... an average novel in about two hours... a complete magazine in 25 minutes... technical documents of over 100 pages in less than one hour... with better retention. No machines are used.

Comprehension? As a Reading Dynamics graduate, you will actually understand more, remember more and enjoy more of what you read.

Now! Shouldn't you find out more about it? You can, simply by attending a free demonstration. We'll tell you why you read so slowly. Show you a film, explain the course more fully and answer any questions you might have. You'll be under no pressure to enroll. But do attend. It could change your entire life.

Our Guarantee: Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics guarantees to increase the reading efficiency of each student at least three times, according to the beginning and ending tests, or will refund the entire tuition. This refund is conditional upon the student's having attended all the required classes, maintained the required hours of homework and followed the directions of his instructor.

English courses are given in Quebec City, Sherbrooke, Ottawa, Montreal and all other major cities in Canada.

ATTEND A FREE PRESENTATION

NIGHTLY, FROM FEBRUARY THE 10TH TO THE 22ND INCLUSIVE (except Sunday) at 6:30 and 8:00 p.m. on weekdays and at 10:00 and 11:30 a.m. on Saturdays.

Notwithstanding the provisions of Article XII above, such by-elections held before January 1, 1970 shall be conducted in the same manner as were the original elections.

Redmen defeat Braves; play Sherbrooke next

by Ira Turetsky

The Redmen played about five minutes of basketball last night. With a little more than fifteen minutes remaining in the first half, Coach Mooney's disciples led the Ottawa Braves 20-0. Unfortunately, after this early hot streak, a nervous breakdown by star center, Nasko Golomeev, and a total disappearance by most of his teammates, contributed to a totally desultory 98-79 victory for the Red and White.

In the early going, the Redmen were not far short of sensational. With Sam Wimisner and Pierre Brodeur hitting from the outside, and Golomeev controlling the boards, the team exploded into an insurmountable 20 point lead.

At this point the Redmen chose to fall apart. They were led in this, as they are in every thing else, by the erstwhile Mr. Golomeev. After berating his teammates for transgressions, great and small, the Bulgarian giant led them in several rounds of "throw away the ball".

The Braves, who were a good team, took advantage of the dissention and began to climb back into the game. By the end of the half, they had crept to within 11, trailing 50-39.

Golomeev scored 19 points in the opening session, but after an exceptional start, he played about as poorly as he is capable. Brodeur, who played a truly fine game, had 13, and a rejuvenated Wimisner had 10.

Between halves, the team made an emotional adjustment. And the hysteria that characterized the first half disappeared.

With the exception of Steve Fraid, for whom the initial trauma was obviously too much, the Redmen played a settled, if dull second half.

The team began to get the ball to Golomeev who responded with multitudinous baskets. Brodeur moved inside to help out on the boards, while Wimisner and Andy "Clit" Orris brought up the ball.

Orris Solid

Orris has been moved to guard, where he has never played before, and he has come up with some fine ball. Except for a brief but total collapse Orris played a steady game both offensive and defensively.

Golomeev came up with his third consecutive 50 point effort as he garnered 33 points in the second half, to finish with 52. Brodeur, who is playing very well lately, had 17, Wimisner had 13 and Fraid came up with 10 in spite of himself.

The Redmen now go on the road for the next two weeks. This weekend, they will travel to scenic Sherbrooke to play Sherbrooke on Friday and Bishop's on Saturday. After that, they will move on to Kingston where they will try to clinch the final playoff spot in the OQAA, against Queen's.

The team is now 18-4, and they have enjoyed unprecedented popularity among the proletariat. They will not play at home until February 25, when they will host Sir George in the final regular season game. Mark Flaum, a progressive student, has become a member of the jock community, much to the dismay of all concerned. He hasn't missed a game yet, and he urges all fans to follow the team to the ends of the earth, or at least to Kingston.

At this point, it appears likely that the Redmen will be partaking in some postseason competition. The success of this venture depends mainly on tightening the defense and getting the ball to Nasko. If these two things take place, an OQAA title is not out of the question. After that, the world.

SPOTLIGHTING...

by Ian Urquhart

Norm Lord

Relegated to the lower-middle class position of fourth in the OQAA eastern division, the hockey Redmen must once again resort to crying "Wait till next year" to skeptical puck fans on campus.

The non-believers might be convinced of better things to come by looking at the names on coach Brian Gilmour's list of possible recruits. Among others, goalies Ken Dryden of the Big Red of Cornell and Andy Molino of the Loyola Warriors are known to be considering continuing their academic studies and athletic recreation at McGill next year.

But the addition of either of these two highly acclaimed personalities of the ice to the Redmen roster is hardly likely by itself to give McGill its first trip to the OQAA playoffs since 1962. Not that Dryden and Molino are not excellent college goalies, but in Norm Lord the Redmen already have a puckstopper who is among the top three in the whole OQAA, and his efforts have not been enough alone to lift the team from mediocrity.

Although Lord has not been able to make the Redmen a contender singlehandedly, he at least has raised them from the ranks of the ridiculous. He and defencemen Ken Rod Ross are the only additions of note to the team that finished dead last in the OQAA last year with a feeble 2-14 record. And there have been significant subtractions from the 1967-68 lineup, including leading scorer John Tibbits.

Move up in standings

Yet the 1968-69 Redmen are 5-8 in the OQAA, and have also beaten Sir George (twice) and Sherbrooke, the second and third place teams in the OSL, in a satisfying, if not dramatic, turnabout from last year. The cause of the improvement is partly the coaching of Gilmour, who has urged determination and discipline from players that predecessor Dave Copp treated too kindly. But Gilmour's ulcer would be much less dormant if it were not for his goalie.

"Lord is the only reason that we have been in contention in as many games as we have," the rookie coach says, regretting that he does not have as many players of the calibre of his goalie. "He certainly deserves to be named an all-star more than anybody else on the team."

Lord is a first year law student who is celebrating his 21st birthday today. He played for Collège Séminaire de Philosophie for seven years but not in his final year because the team was disbanded for lack of funds.

Thus, the Redmen's most valuable player had not been on skates for 18 months when he came to McGill this year. He timidly returned to action in two practices with the Law School intramural team, but the talent showed through the rustiness and he was noticed by winger Jean Dupéré, who dragged him to a varsity practice.

Lord admits to being scared at first even in practice with the Redmen after his long layoff, but he soon made the team and replaced inexperienced Dave Craig as first string goalie. He looked shaky in his first few starts and suffered through two bad games in the holidays as Boston College bombed the Redmen, 8-1 and 9-3. Lord made 54 saves in the 8-1 loss, but the lack of support from his teammates was discouraging.

Since the Christmas break, though, Lord has established himself as the best goalie in the OQAA east and his team as an underdog to be wary of in the division. If he is hot, the Redmen can be very tough to beat. They are 3-4 in the OQAA since Christmas, and in all seven games the teams were tied or one goal apart going into the last five minutes of play.

In recent games at the Winter Stadium, Lord frustrated the highscoring Carleton Ravens by stopping 48 of 52 shots in a 4-1 loss, then turned back the Georgians 44 times in a 3-1 win, including 26 saves in the second period alone.

After the Sir George game, Georgian coach Dave Dies confided to Gilmour, "It's just incredible how your goalie outpsyched my team."

A good goalie upsets the opposing team, forces them to change their style of play. A bad goalie discourages his own team, and Redmen veterans like Skippy Kerner, Rod McCarthy and Dupéré will tell how they felt like quitting some nights in the last few years as a procession of clowns performed in the net behind them.

Flopping style successful

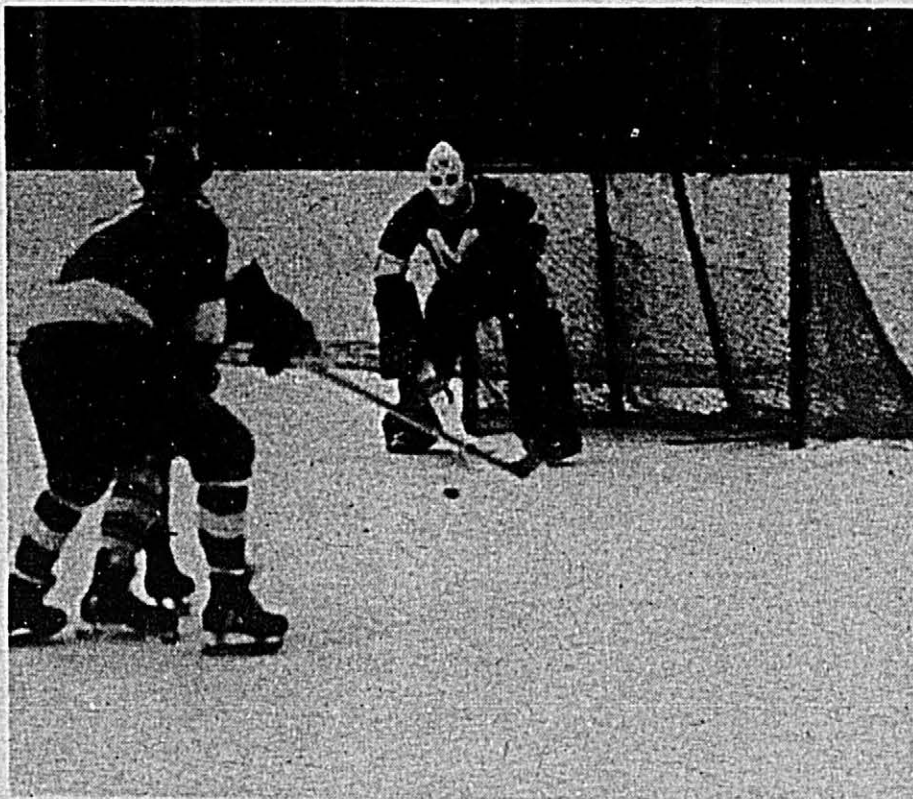

Lord is not without his own faults. He flops too much, especially on breakaways. But in the OQAA, a goalie can get away with flopping in scrambles around his net because the forwards are not quick enough to lift the puck over a prostrate padded lump. Furthermore, he has what Gilmour describes as "a good, no, a great glove hand."

Gilmour is touting his goalie as the east's all-star. The Redmen coach cannot list his own players on the all-star ballot, but he will make sure that the opposing coaches know Lord's name. Jacques Audy of Laval and Rick Benning of Carleton have better goals-against averages than the Redmen netminder's 3.81, but they see the puck half as much during a game.

Regardless of his prestige throughout the league, Lord should win the Bobby Bell Trophy as the Redmen's MVP. A good example of his worth can be seen in comparing the Redmen's two games with Queen's to date.

In the first, November 16, the Redmen outshot the Gaels, 46-24, and still lost, 8-4, as goalie Craig demonstrated that he was not really much of an improvement on last season's osmotic being, Bruce Glencross.

In the second match with the Gaels last Saturday, the Redmen, minus Tibbits, Norm Chouinard, Roger Ouellette, and George Hamilton (all of whom have quit the team since November), Mike Stacey (injured) and Rod McCarthy (injured for half the game), still managed to outshoot Queen's, 34-25, and, with Lord in goal, won an exciting 3-2 contest. Lord was the difference between a spirited victory and an irritating defeat.

FEBRUARY 11

A fireman from one of the five trucks that answered the alarm gets ready (left) to fight the flames and smoke with an air tank on his back. Several police and firemen were taken away suffering from smoke inhalation. Meanwhile, firemen were also fighting the blaze from the outside, nine stories above street level (middle). They sprayed water into the computing center through windows that had been shattered by the occupiers when they started to feel the effects of the smoke. Police had to charge the barricades on the inside several times before they finally broke through and arrested the students. On the right, police (not riot squad yet) get ready to make one of their early — and abortive — attempts. They were driven back by the smoke and fire.

The devastation in the Computing Center

IN CONTRAST to the demonstrations in the streets around the Hall building, the atmosphere in the ninth floor corridor was like a scene out of a war movie just before John Wayne and the Marines hit the beaches. Newsmen prowled between the protesters' barricades and the knots of helmeted and uniformed police, listened to half-understood conversations, laughed loudly.

No one really knew what to expect and it was a relief to hear police plans at an impromptu press conference. We were to be the gauntlet through which the demonstrators, after the police had removed them, were to pass on their way to freight elevators and the paddy wagons in the sub-basement garage. The operation, termed "evacuation" by a police legal adviser, was to be swift, neat and painless.

It wasn't.

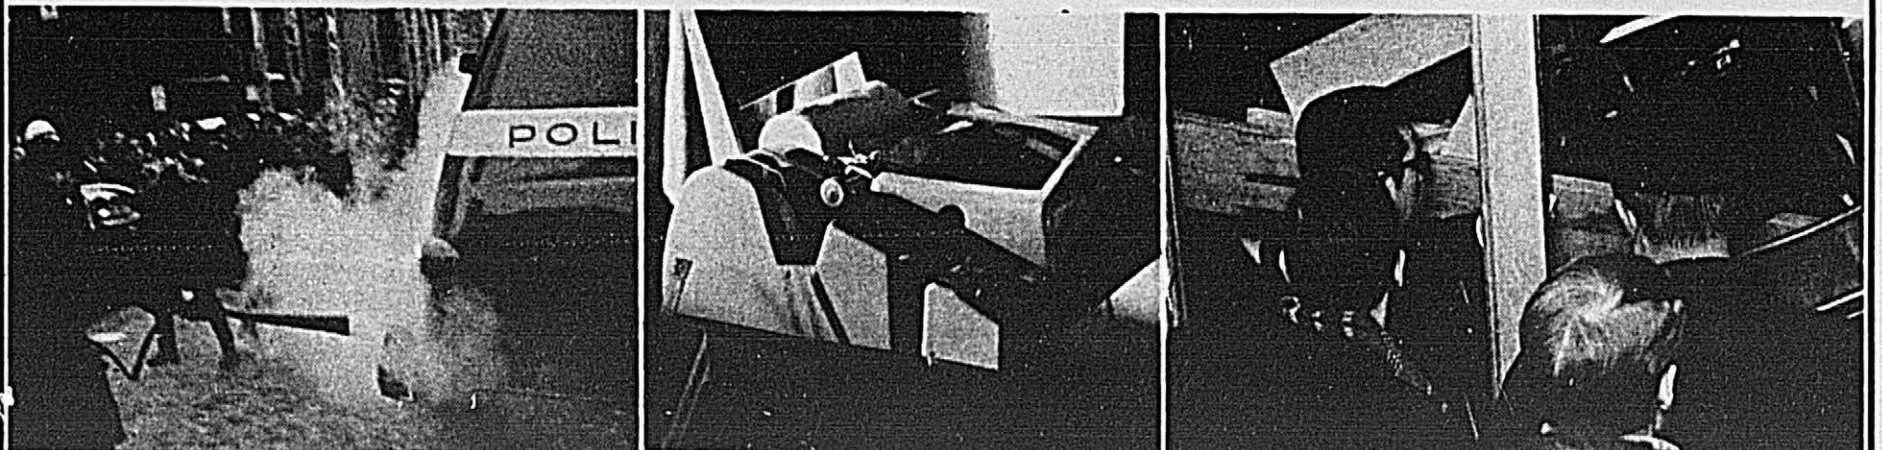

When the line of police began to dismember the six-foot-deep barricade, someone yelled there was smoke coming from the entrance. Then the lights went out and everyone began to cough and gag and shout for "extincteurs". Within seconds the entire section was filled with smoke and there was a jet of flame from the main barricade; everyone stampeded for the escalators and the first demonstrators were led into a detention room on the other side of the floor.

According to one police officer, the demonstrators, after lighting the barricade, fled to the rear of the computing centre, some trying to make their way out by a fire exit, others crowding around the computer itself, to take advantage of the ventilating system. It was then that they attacked the machinery with axes and wooden bars.

The only fatalities were several dozen rats in the psychology department, which were destined for behavioral experiments.

Two anxious fathers came to the computing center (left) looking for their children. After their children yelled at them over the barricades that they were going to stay, and that their fathers should "get O'Brien (vice-principal John O'Brien) to call off the cops', the parents left. The police had troubles besides those on the ninth floor. Here (middle), someone stuffed a gasoline-soaked rag into the exhaust of a police van, but that fire was short-lived. One of the results of the real fire upstairs was water damage — on the right is a computer terminal which, by the looks of its paper roll, underwent a good soaking in addition to being smashed apart before the action was finally over.
